Session	3B
Date	May 22, 2014
Time	2:00 – 3:00
Speaker	Craig Applegath

- Symbiotic City – The regenerative nature of cities, Holistic guidelines for addressing healthy population growth and city development

Architect, urban designer, and a pioneer in planning and design for regenerative buildings, urban resilience and symbiotic cities, Craig is an Architect and Principal at the Toronto studio of DIALOG. Craig is also the founding member and the current co-moderator of SymbioticCities.net, a network of architects, planners, engineers and economists committed to exploring the challenges and opportunities of designing and planning regenerative, symbiotic cities. Craig speaks about his research and design explorations at conferences and workshops internationally.

Craig is a passionate advocate for developing planning and design solutions that make sense in a world challenged by climate change and ecological transformation. Craig first trained as a biologist and then as an architect and urban designer. Since graduating from the Graduate School of Design at Harvard University with a Master of Architecture in Urban Design his career has focused on leading complex institutional planning and design projects, and is internationally recognized for his design and advocacy of eco-effective, regenerative buildings and places. In addition to his professional practice responsibilities, Craig writes and lectures on regenerative eco-effective building design and symbiotic city design. This has included speaking presentations at major conferences in Toronto, Vancouver, Chicago, San Francisco and Guangzhou, China.
