A NumberTEN/1080 collaboration, this project, set to open in summer 2023, is designed to highlight the bond between humans and animals and provides space for adoption, education, outreach and retail in addition to clinic, holding and cremation services. The building design creates a welcoming space for interaction, with distinct zones tailored to the functional needs of each service. The design is an efficient and cost-effective model of humane care and community involvement with the health standards of a hospital, the educational aspects of a school, and the appeal of a community destination.

The interior theming creates a place for everyone to engage, learn, and interact with animals. Through playful interconnected geometry, the visual language used in the space graphically represents the relationship and bond between humans and their pets through interactive features, educational graphics, integrated signage and donor recognition. Pops of colour and large-scale imagery visually represents the joy felt when engaging with our four-legged friends.

Director's Message

The Executive Council met on March 3rd and 4th in Toronto. There was a major storm in Toronto that Friday so I was one of 7 Directors who was unable to travel and attended via Zoom instead.

We received updates on various CCDC forms...

When do payment obligations trigger in construction contracts?

It goes without saying that payment obligations lie at the core of construction agreements.
